What to do if your child goes missing

Practical advice for parents and carers

Before contacting the police

- Go and check the bedroom and any other place where your child might be within the house or building.
- Check the garden, garage, sheds, grounds and surrounding area.
- Check with your child's friends, school, work, neighbours, relatives or anyone else who may know of his or her whereabouts. Ask them to tell you immediately if they hear from your child.
- Try to contact your child directly via mobile phone, text, or social networking sites (such as BBM, Twitter, Facebook, etc).
- If you know where your child is and you are still concerned for their safety (eg if they are at a house where you suspect criminal activities are taking place) you can ask the police to carry out a welfare check on that house or location.

Contacting the police

- Ring 999 or 101 or your local police telephone number once you have carried out the above checks and you have still not found your child.
- You do not need to wait for 24 hours. Report your child as missing straight away.
- When you first contact the police, record the crime reference number. When an officer attends, record their name, badge number and telephone number. Ask who will follow up the initial investigation.

You will then be asked the following questions:

When and where was your child last seen? By who?

When and where did you last see your child?

What were they doing when last seen?

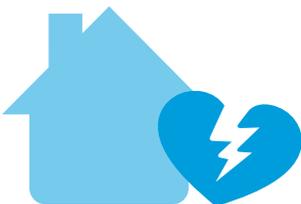

What are your most pressing worries and why?

Are these circumstances out of character for your child?

Are they taking any medication which they may need immediately?

Further questions may be asked at this time depending on the circumstances.

Your child will then be classified as either MISSING or ABSENT and the call taker will explain the next steps. This is likely to include police officers attending your home to take a detailed missing person report.

Other things you can do

- Think about what your child was wearing when you last saw them. Have they taken any extra clothes?
- What have they taken with them, eg mobile phone, money, bank cards, any items of sentimental value?
- Check your home computers for any leads such as online contacts or details of planned meetings.
- After you have completed the above checks, close the door to your child's room and don't touch anything in there.
- Find out if any of your child's friends are missing.
- Have a recent photograph available (the police may need it).
- Keep a record of everyone you contact, including the date and time, the name of person and/or organisation, and any phone numbers received.
- Keep your phone on and keep a record of any calls; this may be the only way your child can reach you.
- Check telephone bills for the past few months for any unfamiliar calls.

When your child returns home

Make follow-up phone calls: Let all your contacts know that your child has returned home, including the police. The police may need to speak or meet with your child to ensure they have returned safe and well.

Show your child that you're happy to have them back home: Many children fear the initial meeting with their parents. Remain calm, express relief and tell your child you love them and that together you will solve any problems.

Allow time to settle in: Your child may need a shower, a meal, clean clothes, or to go to sleep.

Get medical attention: Bring your child to your family doctor to address any medical concerns.

Talk with your child: Discuss how you can work together to prevent them from leaving again. Acknowledge that some problems take time and effort to resolve.

Get assistance and support: An independent organisation may follow-up with your child to see if they need more support. It is important to reach out and take advantage of any support available to you, your child and your family. Asking for help is a sign of strength and shows you are taking the issue seriously.

Why do young people run away?

Children leave home for a wide variety of reasons, including trouble at school or arguments within the family. They may leave on impulse following a family quarrel, or in protest over a rule or an isolated incident. Sometimes they may be drawn away by something outside of the home such as older friends.

If you're concerned that your child might be thinking about running away, try taking the following steps.

Talk to your children openly and honestly.

Listen to them when they talk about their concerns, feelings and any difficulties they may be facing.

Respect their emotional responses in every situation.

Encourage them to succeed and to work through their differences and struggles.

Support your children's need to gain independence, and develop appropriate relationships with others.

Create opportunities for them to learn how to make positive decisions in their lives.

Teach your children to be accountable for their actions.

Protect them from feelings of loneliness and isolation.

Provide a place of safety for your children, both emotionally and physically.

Defend them openly against harassment or verbal abuse of any kind.

Make your home a place of trust and support that meets their needs.

About us

The Children's Society has over 130 years' experience of supporting society's most vulnerable children and young people. We work directly with these children, many of whom have nowhere else to turn, to ensure that they are loved, valued and listened to. We transform the lives of many more children by pressurising government and local authorities to protect them, and we challenge the negative attitudes that perpetuate harm and injustice.

We have been a leading provider of specialist services working with children who run away for over 25 years and we run dedicated projects that support hundreds of children in England. We lead the research, policy and practice agenda to ensure that no young runaway is left to survive on their own.

We can only continue to transform the lives of these children and young people with your support. If you'd like to find out more about how to help us:
